INCOMPAS: Cable Companies Boxing You into the Past. FCC Plan to #UnlockTheBox will set the Future Free

Washington, D.C. (February 16, 2016) – In response to comments made during a press conference today by the cable industry, Chip Pickering, CEO of INCOMPAS and a member of the Consumer Video Choice Coalition released the following statement:

“The cable companies will do anything and say anything to box consumers into the monopoly set top box era of the past. The future is about freedom and customer control, not cable control.

“The FCC plans to ‘unlock the box’ and let new content from independent programmers stream in. After decades of rising prices, it’s time to let consumers choose their own device, which will create a brand new market for innovation. It’s time to let market forces end the set top box monopoly era.”
