Pickering: Net Neutrality Red Alert is a Wake-Up Call for Red State Republicans

INCOMPAS Goes RED with New Videos for Net Neutrality Campaign

WASHINGTON, D.C. (May 9, 2018) – On Wednesday, an online ‘Red Alert’ campaign to support Net Neutrality will kick off to coincide with the discharge of the Senate’s Congressional Review Act (CRA) resolution to overturn the controversial Federal Communications Commission (FCC) Order which ended two decades of bipartisan open internet policy.

INCOMPAS, the internet and competitive networks association, which represents a number of streaming, edge and small fiber companies, will take part in the Red Alert campaign by releasing two short videos on Twitter.

The videos highlight overwhelming Republican support for net neutrality, drawing attention to several polls.

In addition to the videos, Chip Pickering, CEO of INCOMPAS released the following statement:

“Net neutrality is America’s policy. This is an 80-20 issue, with conservatives across the nation showing overwhelming support for strong open internet policies that help small, main street businesses compete.

“The net neutrality red alert should be a wake-up call for red state Republicans. The GOP base, especially younger conservatives, want strong net neutrality because it has launched a streaming revolution and makes starting a business easier and less expensive.

“No one wants the internet to look more like cable. We urge Members of Congress to vote in favor of the CRA, righting the FCC’s wrong, and working together to preserve bipartisan net neutrality protections which ensure no blocking, no throttling, no paid prioritization and strong interconnection policy that fosters streaming and cloud growth.”
